Headline:
Bright spells and scattered showers today.

Today:
Some bright or sunny periods and scattered showers, occasionally heavy in the southwest. Coastal areas becoming mainly dry with the best of the afternoon sunshine. Light winds. Chilly, but pleasant in sunshine.

Tonight:
Showers mostly dying away through the evening, although a few continuing across the north. Otherwise becoming dry with clear periods and some patchy frost, mainly in the south.

Sunday:
Some bright spells and scattered showers, this mainly confined to the east in the afternoon with western areas becoming largely dry. Northeast remaining rather cloudy.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
A few showers on Monday, some persistent rain spreading to south later. Rather cold, bright and showery on Tuesday and Wednesday with overnight frost in places.
